Status Update on Tohoku Recovery

-CGJ, Seattle

Dear Friends,

As we approach the fifth anniversary of the Great East Japan Earthquake and Tsunami, coming up on March 11, 2016, I would like to take this opportunity to update you all on the current status of reconstruction in the Tohoku Region. The following points present an overview of recovery operations, including relocation of evacuees, restoration of public infrastructure, revival of industry, and revitalization of Fukushima.

- The number of evacuees has decreased from approximately 470,000 to approximately 180,000.

- Planning for housing reconstruction has finished and construction work has been accelerated. Relocation and public housing are scheduled to be at 70% and 86% completion, respectively, within the next year.
- Medical and school facilities are restored to 95% and 98%, respectively.
- Industrial production indices have recovered to the pre-earthquake level, 85% of seafood processing has restarted, and 74% of the tsunami-affected farmland is again available.
- Disaster debris removal has been completed in Iwate and Miyagi Prefectures, and completed in Fukushima Prefecture except for in the areas still under evacuation orders.
- Power plants at Fukushima Daiichi remain in cold shutdown. Fuel removal of unit 4 was completed in 2014 and decommissioning and contaminated water management operations are progressing steadily.
- Atmospheric radiation in Fukushima is equivalent to that of other major cities around the world, except for the immediate area around Fukushima Daiichi.
- Radiation levels in seawater outside the port at Fukushima Daiichi are consistently well below the density limit specified by the Reactor Regulation.
- Japan's food safety limits are among the strictest in the world and no food exceeding these limits enters the market.

As you can see, the recovery is proceeding well, Japan is safe and ready to welcome visitors, and Tohoku is going through a strong restoration. On behalf of the government and people of Japan, I would like to express our sincerest gratitude for all the support from around the world, including the United States and notably the people of the Pacific Northwest.

With the 2020 Tokyo Olympics approaching, I hope you will all consider visiting Japan and buying Japanese products, so you can experience this revitalization firsthand.

Sincerely,

Masahiro Omura
Consul General of Japan in Seattle

UPCOMING EVENTS

The Great East Japan Earthquake and Tsunami Commemoration Event at Teatro ZinZanni March 12, 2016

-CGJ, Seattle

Join us as we mark the 5th anniversary since the Tohoku earthquake and tsunami in Japan. We will screen the musical "100 Ways to Say Thank You" made by tsunami survivors, and hear from students at Tohoku University about new disaster technology in Japan and learn about disaster preparedness in the Pacific Northwest and how we can prepare for the next Great Earthquake that might come during our own lifetime.

This event is free to the public and will include speeches from Japanese dignitaries and emergency preparedness experts, along with a sing-a-long of a song from the musical with Tateo Teramoto and Hans Teuber, director of the Teatro ZinZanni band. It will close with a number from the Songs of Hope chorus, sung every year since the disaster. We encourage you to join us to Remember, Repair and Prepare.

PAST EVENTS

Sake Tasting and Meet the Brewers Reception

-CGJ, Seattle

On February 20, the Sake Tasting and Meet the Brewers Reception was held at the Consul General's Official Residence. The reception gave guests from local restaurants and distributors the opportunity to taste exquisite sake samples from brewers throughout Japan, as well as to learn more about the sake industry and how to enjoy drinking sake through on-site lectures. The sake was paired with dishes made with local ingredients to show that it works well not just with Japanese food, but also with other types of cuisine. This event was an important step toward further advancing local sake appreciation.

U.S.-JAPAN RELATIONS

U.S. Congressional Delegation's Visit to Japan

-Cabinet Secretariat

The strong relationship between Japan and the U.S. has been built on a foundation of personal trust and understanding between officials from both countries. To further that communication, Congressman Jim Sensenbrenner, Congressman Jim McDermott, and Congressman Hank Johnson visited Tokyo as part of both the US-Japan Legislative Exchange Program and the US-Japan-South Korea Legislative Exchange Program and discussed important political, economic, and security issues.

During their trip, the Congressmen met with Prime Minister Abe, who expressed his appreciation for their long-time contribution to the Japan-US alliance and exchanged opinions on Japan-US cooperation.

Outside of the official meeting, Congressman McDermott, who serves as a Co-Chair for the US-Japan Legislative Program, took advantage of the opportunity to experience a sumo tournament for the first time.

The Embassy of Japan will continue to exert efforts to further strengthen the people-to-people exchange between our two countries, including legislative exchange.

Prime Minister Abe's Speech: Universal Health Coverage in the New Development Era

-Ministry of Foreign Affairs

"I would like to lead the discussion on the health challenges that the world faces in close cooperation with the other G7 countries."

This is what Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said in his speech at an International Conference entitled "Universal Health Coverage in the New Development Era: Toward Building Resilient and Sustainable Health Systems" which was held in Tokyo in December. Various governments, international organizations, private foundations, and intellectuals gathered to discuss the creation of a resilient and equal universal health coverage (UHC), providing valuable input for the upcoming G7 Ise-Shima Summit and the sixth Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD VI).

Prime Minister Abe announced his intentions to take up health as a priority agenda at the G7 Ise-Shima Summit and lead the discussion on health issues, particularly by improving the response to public health emergencies.
