The goal of “Walk in U.S., Talk on Japan” is to increase awareness about Japan in the United States on a variety of issues and to further develop the U.S.-Japan relationship through people-to-people diplomacy. Supported by the Prime Minister's Cabinet Office, teams of Japanese citizens of various backgrounds, led by former, high-ranking Japanese diplomats, travel to the U.S. to share their perspectives and encourage open discussions with the local communities.

This team will be led by the Honorable Ichiro Fujisaki, former Ambassador of Japan to the United States. The team will also include four other members, each with a background in finance, legal services, marketing, and real estate brokerage – all ready to discuss issues on the recovery from the Great East Japan Earthquake, Japan's technology, culture policy, and economic policy.

There will be a Q & A session at the end of the event. Your questions and views are most welcome.

This programs is co-organized by JCCCW.
